FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Three New Members Join the HFHMM Board of Directors

SILVER SPRING, MD (September 27, 2017) — The Board of Directors at Habitat for Humanity Metro Maryland (HFHMM) just got a little bigger. Three new members are joining the team: John Pranzatelli, Scott Umosella, and Gerard McLoughlin, Jr.

John Pranzatelli is the President and Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of MBDA Inc., where he oversees the corporate direction and strategy for MBDA's US operations including research and development, manufacturing, marketing, business development, and partnerships. He was formerly the Vice President of Strategy and Business Operations at MBDA Inc., and previous to that was the Vice President of Finance and Business Management for several operating groups of Northrop Grumman Corporation. Pranzatelli comes to HFHMM armed with a Bachelor of Science in Economics and a Master of Science in Public Management and Policy from Carnegie Mellon University, along with his many years of financial experience.

Scott Umosella is a senior manager in CohnReznick's audit and accounting practice in the Bethesda office. He has over 12 years of experience in public accounting providing client services in audit, reviews, and compilations. Umosella received both his Bachelor of Business of Administration and MBA from Loyola University. As a Certified Public Accountant (CPA), he is affiliated with the American Institute of CPAs, Greater Washington Society of CPAs, and the Maryland Association of CPAs. HFHMM looks forward to the financial experience he will bring to the table.

Gerard McLoughlin, Jr. has spent the past 14 years working in commercial loans and financing at several banks including Mercantile Potomac Bank, PNC, and United Bank, where he is currently Senior Vice President. Prior to his involvement in banking, McLoughlin familiarized himself with various industries through working at public relations firms. He completed a Bachelor of Arts in Communications at Fordham College in New York, and went on to complete an MBA with a concentration on finance at Marymount University. McLoughlin keeps himself busy on the Ivymount Corporation board, Catholic Business Network of Montgomery County board, and with St. Jane de Chantal Church.

The willingness of Pranzatelli, Umosella, and McLoughlin to serve on the Board of Directors is appreciated. As HFHMM grows, the organization is eager to work with these three new members.
